ALEX BOURBIGOT ADIDAS 1-PAGER · MARKETING

I'M BACK.

Last year, I applied for an adidas internship. I made it past the first round, but no further. I took that as a sign I still had more to learn. So I spent the year finding out what it takes to turn an idea into something people actually join.

#2 APPLICATION

02 WHAT CHANGED

ONE YEAR. NEW SPLITS.

On paper: management, export sales and sport retail.

BEYOND THE CV ↓

NOV 2025

19K+

LA GAMBERGE

Started posting regularly. The audience grew, video by video, to 19,000+.

APR 2026

2:38

PARIS MARATHON

From 2:59 to 2:38:21 in one year. I know the sport by doing it.

SEP 2026

2,020

BACK TO RUN

2,020 signed up. Around 1,200 took part. About 250 finished all 30 days.

MAR 2027

NEXT

HERZOGENAURACH

Six months. Ready to move.

03 YOU GOT THIS

REMEMBER IT'S A GAME.

5 km every day sounds like pressure, and Back to Run's rules were demanding. So I wrapped them in a playful world: a beaver mascot, a "Tribunal" to plead a missed day, runners pushing each other to come back. A rule on its own asks people to comply. A story and a community give them a reason to join, and to keep following.

WHAT I'D BRING TO MARKETING

01 PLAN THE JOURNEY

I set a goal, designed each stage of the challenge and tracked sign-ups, first runs and finishers separately. A sign-up is only the start.

02 ADAPT WHILE IT'S LIVE

I ran the challenge day by day and launched "Le Coffre" during the campaign to create a new moment. Watch, adjust, relaunch.

03 TURN CONTENT INTO PARTICIPATION

Videos are one thing. In July, I brought people together for a community run in Paris. In September, I launched Back to Run.

04 THE REST OF THE STORY

LAGAMBERGE.COM/ADIDAS-MARKETING →

alex.bourbigot78@gmail.com · From 1 March 2027 · Ready to move to Herzogenaurach